Principal investigator of the research project "The communicative realization of inclusion for people with disability in social media" (Post-Doc)

Annamaria Fabian has teaching and research experience in different fields of (mainly German applied) Linguistics ranging from classical research fields such as grammar and syntax over discourse analysis and pragmatics to conversation analysis and digital linguistics.

In the first half of my academic career in teaching and research I acquired in-depth competencies in empirical research in many research areas, i.e., political communication, media communication, and corporate communication, and necessary corpus linguistic quantitative and qualitative working methods, including Tools and Software for corpus-based and corpus-driven data-mining. I have published different peer-reviewed monographs, volumes and papers at prestigious international publishing-houses and organized panels at world congresses such as AILA, IPrA and IGALA. In addition, I actively pursue science communication with different stakeholders from media, politics and civil society. My interest in emerging related to society and technologies motivated me to doing research on minority issues and communication in analog and digital media, which I present at conferences with policy makers such as my panel on the representation of "refugees" and "migrants" in discourses of media and politics across European countries and languages (invitation of the EU to the Jean Monnet Conference in Brussels)

Since 2020, I have been establishing an independent research and teaching area in applied linguistics with colleagues, which I call the Linguistics of Diversity and Inclusion (in digital media) and have since successfully represented at international congresses. I am engaged in international collaborations in the field of the communication of inclusion and diversity in digital media across all social domains. Those projects are based on the usage of corpus linguistic methods including tools and software for the quantitative and qualitative contrastive analysis of the communication of diversity and inclusion across several languages, cultures and countries.

2.1 Higher Education

5/2014 - 10/2021	PhD at the University of Regensburg, the Otto-Friedrich-University of Bamberg and at the Alpen-Adria-University of Klagenfurt, completed with the acquisition of the doctoral degree with the highest grade of very good with distinction at the Alpen-Adria-University of Klagenfurt. (Note on parental leave: In the meantime, the birth of my twins took place in 2017, followed by two years of parental leave).
	Topic of the dissertation: Modal verbs in political argumentation in federal press conferences. This dissertation focuses on persuasive argumentation through modal verbs in political and media interaction. Corpus linguistic quantitative and qualitative methods were used in the book. (double and blind peer-reviewed publication in the renowned series "Linguistik - Impulse und Tendenzen")
10/2008 - 03/2011	Master of Arts Media and Communication at the University of Passau (Since graduation I regularly work on the interface of media and communication and linguistics).
	Thesis: Discourse analysis of the German TV duel 2009 between Merkel and Steinmeier. It received the rating "very good".
2005 - 2008	Bachelor of Arts European Studies at the University of Passau
2003 - 2005	"German Philology and Teacher" and Diploma "International Relations" at the University of Veszprém (today: Pannonian University of Veszprém) (highest degree: Academic Intermediate Examination because of the transfer to Passau)

2.4 Language skills

- German and Hungarian at native level
- English (including scientific and business English) at C1 level (extensive book publications and presentations as well as panels at international empirical congresses with a focus on persuasive communication, digital linguistics, and computer-mediated communication with respect to diversity and inclusion)

2.5 Profession and internships

since 2022 -	Principal investigator (post-doc) in the Department of German Linguistics (Prof. Dr. Karin Birkner/applied linguistics) at the University of Bayreuth in my own research project "Digital communicative strategies in social media for the inclusion of people with disabilities" . In addition to the University of Bayreuth, the project is associated with the Bavarian Research Institute for Digital Transformation (BidT) at the Bavarian Academy of Sciences. The project is funded by the Bavarian Ministry of Arts and Sciences. Funding amount to approximately €300,000 over four years.
Since 2014 -	Extensive teaching experience with a focus on the communication of diversity and inclusion (analog and digital), media linguistics, political linguistics, corporate communication (analog and digital), and digital corpus linguistics through my position as a research assistant (post-doc) at the University of Bayreuth and, before that, through teaching assignments and lectureships at the University of Passau and U. Regensburg, at the Otto-Friedrich University of Bamberg, and at the Alpen-Adria University of Klagenfurt. I have taught SE in Klagenfurt (in Bavaria "Hauptseminar" with participation also of doctoral students) and also lectures in Bayreuth. Thus, as one of the few humanities and social scientists, I also taught in the interdisciplinary lecture on "Digital Sciences", organized by computational scientists and applied mathematicians.
2012 – 2013	jobs as a scientist in the industry in London (GB)
01.09.2011 - 31.12.2011	Research assistant and management of the self-developed project "Intercultural Opening between Eastern and Western Europe" (field: intercultural communication) at the University of Passau, foundation of the initiative and preparation of the application to the Ministry of Labor, Social Affairs, Women and Family in Bavaria. 3.1 Monographs

Fabian, Annamaria (2023): Modalverben in der politischen Argumentation – Eine grammatische, semantische, diskursanalytische, konversationsanalytische und kognitionslinguistische Untersuchung des Modalverbgebrauchs in Bundespressekonferenzen. [Modal verbs in political argumentation - A grammatical, semantic, discourse-analytical, conversation-analytical and cognitive-linguistic study of modal verb use in federal press conferences.]

This extensive applied linguistic book, focusing on several linguistic disciplines, in particular empirical discourse analysis and and the communication in the interaction between media and politics, was written at the University of Regensburg, the Otto-Friedrich University of Bamberg, and the Alpen-Adria University of Klagenfurt, and submitted in Klagenfurt. This monograph received the highest possible rating of very good - with distinction. The manuscript, which comprises approx. 340 pages without appendix (with appendix 410 pages, incl. partial corpus), was positively evaluated and published by the editors of the series "Linguistik - Impulse & Tendenzen" after a double anonymous peer review process at de Gruyter.

- Book Description

My corpus linguistic monograph combines qualitative and quantitative methods of Corpus Linguistics. Based on the data set, the argumentative use of modal verbs and their function for persuasive (convincing) argumentation in selected German federal press conferences between 1990 and 2018 are empirically analyzed across multiple disciplines in the field of German (applied) linguistics. In this scientific contribution, modal verbs and argumentation in the process of conversation between participants from politics and media on the way to consensus negotiation are examined and discussed under the influence of journalistic interaction on modal verb use in the media and political negotiation process in the discourse context. The book is also methodologically relevant from the perspective of applied quantitative and qualitative communication research, and was written using innovative corpus linguistic tools and techniques. This book's interdisciplinary roots in applied communication research in Germanic linguistics demonstrates that I can use my applied research skills to do relevant research with data mining that can subsequently contribute to optimizing inclusive communication in professional communication and digital societies.
